SUMMARY

1948

Atomic Energy Act of 1946

Assigned all organizations and properties of the Manhattan Project to the AEC.

30 Dec 46

Letter to the Chairman, AEC from Secretary of War

In connection with discussion concerning storage bases the letter states in part, "I anticipate that when the matter has been reviewed by the President, he will direct that a certain number of bombs and bomb parts be turned over to the armed services and that these bombs and bomb parts will be wholly within the custody of the armed services which are charged with the national defense".

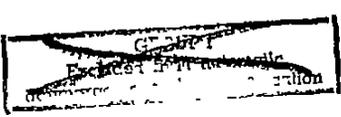

31 Dec 46

Executive Order 9816

Implemented the Atomic Energy Act of 1946. It stated that all fissionable material and all atomic weapons and parts remaining from the Manhattan Project would be transferred to the AEC. It further provided that AEC would deliver fissionable material or weapons to the Armed Forces in the interest of National Defense. (See Sec. 1, 2(c), and 4(e) and Sec. 6(a) of the Atomic Energy Act.

AEC Memorandum to the President with Regard to the Question of Custody

In brief, the Commission's position reflects concern over the division of responsibility civilian and military and the fact that surveillance of atomic weapons is of an entirely different order of complexity and significance than is the case with even the most complicated ordinary weapons.

Lists the important steps that have already been taken to assure a maximum state of readiness.

21 Jul 48

Letter to the President from the Secretary of Defense

Letter urges the President to "advise the AEC that delivery to the Armed Forces of stockpile atomic weapons will be directed, effective approximately four months hence". Incloses letter to Secretary of Defense of 13 March 1948 from Secretaries of Army, Navy and Air Force and letter from JCS of 20 March 1948, both of which recommend transfer of custody as a matter of urgency.

approved on December 1, 1954, should be continued to the extent required by military readiness. I have concluded, however, that in the execution of this program, the AEC should retain custody of dispersed weapons having a yield in excess of 600 KT's. In so doing, the system whereby the AEC retains custody of dispersed weapons will be in consonance with the objective of immediate readiness for use.

Atomic Energy Act of 1946

Assigned all organizations and properties of the Manhattan Project to the AEC.

30 Dec 46

Letter to the Chairman, AEC from Secretary of War

In connection with discussion concerning storage bases the letter states in part, "I anticipate that when the matter has been reviewed by the President, he will direct that a certain number of bombs and bomb parts be turned over to the armed services and that these bombs and bomb parts will be wholly within the custody of the armed services which are charged with the national defense".

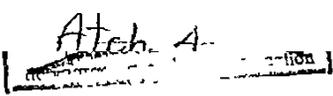

31 Dec 46

Executive Order 9816

Implemented the Atomic Energy Act of 1946. It stated that all fissionable material and all atomic weapons and parts remaining from the Manhattan Project would be transferred to the AEC. It further provided that AEC would deliver fissionable material or weapons to the Armed Forces in the interest of National Defense. (See Sec. 1, 2(c), and 4(e) and Sec. 6(a) of the Atomic Energy Act.
